I built relationship with students through:

- guiding them in class;
- telling my personal information and interests;
- playing with them at break times;
- getting familiar about what they are interested in

It is important because it:

- boosted students' bravery to ask and answer questions;
- increased confidence and calmness during tests;
- developed mutual respect

Relationships with teachers were built through:

- sharing professional and personal experiences;
- working together on resources
- spending time together outside school; exploring the city, watching AFL, etc

It is important because it:

- increased mutual respect and cooperation;
- created stress-free working environment
- increased motivation and creativity
- Reduced homesickness
